Dairy production and consumption is 100% unmatural. Period. Not only is the consumption of dairy products detrimental to human health; it is a process linked to ecological destruction of Mother Earth and is torture for the non-human animals exploited used in this inhumane practice.

The Myth- Female cows do not give milk year round. Most people are uneducated about dairy production in the sense of not knowing that female cows are forcefully impregnated (sound sort of like rape?) to produce milk. Many people seem to believe that female cows are able to give milk year round and that cows are native to North America. Cows originated from India. A lot of people are also not aware that the dairy industry is directly linked to the yeal industry.

Veal- The yeal industry gets all of their calves from the forcefully impregnated female cows that the dairy industry produces. All of the milk that was meant to be for the calves is stolen for human consumption. The yeal industry which happens to be one of the most cruel, but legal practices in the U.S. (but is outlawed in England) is linked with the meat industry. A vegetarian who believes that they are an animal rights activist and a compassionate being but consumes dairy products should realize the hypocrisy they are a part of Ecological Destruction: Cows raised in grazing lands that are allowed to overgraze not only leads to describe atton; it causes erosion of topsoil. The approximate amount of topsoil lost to date in the U.S. is 66%. The pollution of the U.S. groundwater supply is also increased because of the amount of animals used in dairy production. The average amount of water spared by a person following a vegan diet as opposed to a dairy-consuming vegetarian is approximately 900 gallous.

Health Risks- Cows' milk may contain a somewhat adequate amount of calcium, but the protein content in cows' milk is also high. When a human consumes too much protein, it deletes calcium out of their system; mostly through urmation. Cows' nulls is not only high in saturated fats, it has a high amount of cholesterol. Humans that consume an increased amount of saturated fats and cholesterol have an extremely higher chance of developing cancers and heart disease later in life. Plus, with the amount of grass consumed by cows used in dairy production, there are higher amounts of concentrated pesticide levels in their bodies. This can be attributed to higher risks of developing illnesses in humans.

Natural?- Human beings are the only mammals on this planet to consume another mammals milk (except in rare cases). Cows used in dairy production are fed or injected with hormones to increase milk production beyond average or natural limits. They are also overdosed with antibiotics to protect cows from disease and illness. Approximately 20% of all Caucasians and 80% of all people of African descent are lactose intolerant. They are not able to digest dairy products due to an absent enzyme in their bodies.

The bottom line is that: darry production causes unnecessary suffering for innocent animals, it destroys the planet, and that it is unnatural for humans to consume cows' milk. If you consume dairy products, please consider veganism. There are plenty of alternatives to dairy products ranging from soy based milks, ice creams, and cheeses. Go vegan, If not for yourself, do it for the animals and for the Earth. If you would like more information on the dairy industry or veganism, send a SASI; to: Indianapolis Hardline / P () Box 30373 / Indianapolis, IN, 46230-0373

Here we go, diving into the schism. I don't care. I don't take anything back, been shit on to often, always apologizing. Everyone here has something (someone) to hide behind ... self included. Tired of the subtle bigotry and the cowardice. Tired of half truths and hidden meanings. Lots of judgement. Self appointed potentates deeming who's fit and who is not. Someone setting standards who can't live up to them. Ask questions to get answers. Yeah, reason is supposed to conce of those apposable thumbs! Look at who you are, what you are becoming, and who's tagging along. Not too many of us will be here when you get back.

Pigs are our friends

Pigs mind their own business

Pigs have curty tails

Pigs excrete un-selfconsciously

Pigs are highly intelligent creatures

Pigs grunt with joy

Pigs are oppressed

Pigs are maligned by those in power

Cops are no

Cops do not

Cops have guns

Cops are anal

Cops are known to possess a certain small cunning but are not generally characterized as intelligent

Cops grunt with aggression

Cops oppress

Cops are glorified by those in power

SO who are we really insulting?

Fascist pig, Imperialist pig, Capitalist pig, Male Chauvinist Pig... We label pigs with the most unappealing characteristics that human culture has ever produced, but WE put the pigs in those conditions in the first place. Pigs are consistently abused, tortured, raped, confined, and slaughtered because of the very structures they are so often identified with. They are victims, not aggressors. The last thing they need is to be associated with the police state. In a society founded on the oppression of all who do not possess heterosexuality, all who do not possess whiteness and maleness and wealth, how can we fail to recognize the oppression of those who simply lack humanness?

NO, NO, he was not named after the old Hardline zine or that dead dog. Praxis means putting thoughts into action, and this little white friend came into my life when I was starting to do just that. Praxis is a terrier/spitz mix adopted from the pound, where he would have been euthanized and either taken to a research laboratory or turned into lard for soap, or some other animal by-product nightmare. He is a wonderful being; loving, patient, kind, and inherently good. I'm lucky to be his guardian and his friend.

Everyone is doing cookbooks nowadays, or spreading recipes around. Well since I REALLY can't cook, it would be best if I let someone like Praxis handle the recipes and helpful hints.

He's much more practical than I am.

Come shake the earth with me And dry the indigo tears I feel you crying.

I sang a starsong For you

And The Great Spirit Stopped

And listened

And moved on To give you strength And watch over His creation. His gift to his lover and mother

Madam Nature.

She joined me tonight. Our voice An infinite choir Every bit of life

Every bit of spirit in creation Called out to you.

Let our music heal. Let our love clear your mind.

Acidolphilus

Though not an herb, a useful remedy for yeast injections of the vagina. Use a pure acidolphilus with apple cider vinegar, golden seal leaf, and sage. This makes a fine douching solution. We'll want to aid the friendly bacteria who live in our cunts to flourish again and douching, only when necessary with acidolphilus is a good way to feed our guests.

Petroselinum crispum. Legend has it that a woman should always sow parsley. If sown by a man, he must be honest or thoroughly wicked. In Lincolnshire, there's a belief that if a woman feels compulsive about planting parsley, she is going to have a baby. The Greeks held it sacred, saying it had sprung from the blood of Archemorus, the Hero. It contains much vitamin A and C, iron, iodine, manganese and copper. It is also used for the treatment of gonnorhea and syphilus, says Kloss. "For female troubles, it's best to combine the leaves for the treatment of gonnorhea and cramp bark." Use the crushed leaves for swollen breasts or to dry up with equal parts of buchu, black haw, and cramp bark." Use the crushed leaves for swollen breasts or to dry up milk. I always have some growing around my front doorstep; all our children love to nibble at it, from crawling babes on up.

Valerian Valerian officinalis, A German folksong reminds women to wear this "conquering herb" in their waistbands. Very good for nervous complaints. Mixed with pennyroyal, it will sedate a worried woman awaiting menstruation. It can also be mixed with blue cohosh; make a strong tea and drink three times daily for 3 days. It's a proven remedy for hysteria and used for women's problems. A favorite of cats, the scent, however, is usually unpleasant to people. It will increase the menstrual flow. Albertus Magnus, in his "De Mirabilibus Mundi" reports valerian to induce harmony between husband and wife.

Black Crosh Cimicifuga racemosa "macrotys". Used for pelvic disturbances, female complaints and all uterine troubles. Commonly known as "black snakeroot", she is used to bring on a menstrual flow that has been retarded by cold or exposure. Use the dried rhizome roots. Works on uterus to produce estrogene. Vogel. For the ovaries, also, and general womb trouble, says Kloss. Riva reports making a tea with a spoonful of this herb to a cup of water and sprinkling it about the room to prevent any evil spirit from entering. And for over 2,500 years, the Indians and Africans chewed the root to alleviate depression and calm nerves.

Wood Sorrel Oxalis acetosella Oxalidaceae. Used for menstrual irregularities and diseases of the sexual glands, this herb was the original Shamrock of Ireland before the Dutch Clover claimed title. The American Indians used it "to put the north wind into their hooves", by feeding it to their horses.

Wormwood Artemisia absinthium. "Old Woman". Kloss says this is good for chronic leukorrhea. One species was used by American Indian tribes in their sweat lodges and baths to treat the menstrual disorders of girls. Use with great care until you know how it affects you. Absinthe, a powerful narcotic, is banned all over the world. It is made from wormwood, anise oil and alcohol.

White Willow Salix alba, Salix nigra. The Indians use the long slender trees as teepee poles. The black willow Salix alba, Salix nigra. The Indians use the long slender trees as teepee poles. The black willow is used to treat menstrual irregularity. is used as an anaphrodisiac, to curb sexual desire. The bark of white willow is used to treat menstrual irregularity.

Walnut Juglans regia. "Black Walnut". Herman recommends its use in treating leucorrhea, as a douche or injection. The walnut seeds (nuts) contain almost as much protein as a sirloin steak. A spirit distilled from the fresh walnuts calms hysteria and stops the vomiting of one who is pregnant. As an infusion, it is used to check mammary secretions. So, I'd suggest nursing mothers not to use it unless they want to stop breastfeeding. See Total Mothering, appendix.

Billers Weet Solamum dulcamara "nightshade". One of Circe's favorite herbs. It increases the menstrual flow, and is good for syphylis and gonorrhea. Place under a pillow, this herb aids in the forgetting of lost love.

Given Panax quinquefolia L. "Panag", "Osha", "American Ginseng", "Garantogen", "Man Root", "The Fountain of Youth Root", "Flower of Life". Many miraculous claims have been made on this herb. Especially used in hot, moist climates as a preventative to many diseases. The root word panax is the same as the Latin, panacea. Very exciting to the gonads, endocrine glands, especially the ones involved with regeneration. Has been used as an approdisiae. Chinese herbalists have said to me that Dong Quai is better for women than Ginseng and to avoid Ginseng when pregnant. But afterbirth, Chicana midwives give it to prevent any infection. "Tartar Root" as it's sometimes called, was used by Indians to prevent female conception.

Fragaria vesca. The leaves are a proven aid in preventing abortion and they also regulate faulty menstruation. The rash people sometimes develop when eating strawberries is a signal that excess acid in the system is being driven out through the skin faster than other channels of elimination. Information such as this has helped me to see the "allergy myth" in a healthy perspective. Being highly "allergic" as a child, I soon came to understand, via primal-type therapy, study of nutrition, LSD, yoga sadhana, and watching my own babies, that the allergy theory is one I need not live out anymore. The choice is always ours. Allergies "run" in families until we stop running from relationship.

Myrrh Commiphora myrrha. This herb is written about on an Egyptian papyrus dated 2000 B.C. as well as in the Bible. It is good as a douche, with golden seal, for treating leukorrhea. It increases the circulation and number of white blood cells. It disinfects the genito-urinary nucous membranes. The ancients believed it to be the tears of Myrrah. There seems to be a connection between women's herbs and tears; our ability to cry is a gift, like the herbs given to us by the Mother to soothe our pains. The Jews used it in their sacred ointments with which the tabernacle was annointed. Also, as ordained by Jewish law, it was used for the purification of women. Myrrh was always burned in the temples of Iris, the Egyptian Goddess of Love.

Achillea millefolium L. "Milfoil", "Sneezewort". This was named after Achilles and brought to weddings to ensure at least 7 years of happiness to the couple. It's used for vaginal and menstrual troubles. It's especially good with mugwort and sage. If taken often, it promotes the menstrual flow. It is also used to check over profuse bleeding and womb problems. In the menopause, use yarrow as a decoction. In some countries, yarrow is used instead of hops to give sharpness to beer. The stalks are used when consulting the I Ching, the Chinese Book of Changes. I once was worried about the possibility of being pregnant. Michael and I had been practicing Karezza, or non-seminal intercourse, when passion got the best of us. We both experienced orgasmic ejeculation and I fell into blaming. "It's your fault", the loop that hangs up the free flow of being loving. So I meditated and consulted the I Ching. I read the changing line, "There's no fish in the tank. No blame." Sleeping with yarrow under a maiden's pillow would help bring her future husband to her in a dream. It's been used also to test fidelity in parts of England. The woman tickles the inside of her lover's nostril, and if it bleeds, he's a figure of the figure of the fidelity in parts of England.

The second second well, at least you wrote back, that can't say about the krisnna-guy, Gus. that is something angry about every statement made against nardline was against you as well? you do identify totally with the movement, don't you? just as much as every attack against the iskoon was against Gus, because he wny are you so identifies with it totally, in the same way i attacked you through attacking nardline. yes. if you identify yourself with a movement, you have to take the shit you get for it aswell. I did not attack your personal, emotional abilities because I don't know you. emotional abilities because i don't know you. i attacked the hardliner in you. you call me lazy and selfish, you say I 'sit and fester' in my apathy. how the fuck do you know? do you know me? do you know what i do? no, you just know me from my lyrics and my cure little zine and if iam care. cute little time. and if i am not allowed to point finger at you because all i know about you is t hardline propaganda you spit out, then who are you to point a finger at anyone committing a sin towards the on is the so holy hardline rules ? actually, i liked this letter much better then the previous one, because this one was more personal where former one was just hardline propaganda. i the former one was just hardline propaganda. I mean, please read it again, it was written with a selfrightious tongue all the way. that's why i wrote back using the hardest and most attacking language i could come up with.

there is one more thing i'd like to say right now there is one more thing i'd like to say right now and that is: whenever one disagrees with krishna stuff, one jets a replie like 'you didn't understand', and here you are, at the hardline front, telling me exactly the same 'you didn't understand'. What does understanding the hardline phylosophy mean to you? agreeing with it. sorty, i do not. maybe this new translation of sin and redemption is acceptable to you, if you think anybody who doesn't agree simply 'didn't understand', well then you are far off from being an open person. I simply do not agree with people who are anti-choice, who are homophobic and who are about 'if you are not with me then you are against me'. you are not with me then you are against me'.

looking forward to your replie,

Hello Wim.

Sorry it's been so long, I've moved, started a new full time job, and ... oh, and I've done this zine. Wall, I must say, you made my blood boil once more. Nothing really, just all of the parallels to me and a devoke, but afterall, I did say that Hardline was (is) that much a part of me. I think that my anger was a result of some growth I've been experiencing. The been testing the boundaries of my spirituality and I've been able to put alot of things into perspective. I can't believe I'm about is say this. YOU were right. I had no right to assume you are who you say you are. I should be known better. Its just so hard to identify a genuine persovality when so many people just talk, talk, talk. Bulyon know what? What cisc am I supposed to think? I'm lucky because Hardline defines my moral structure, and it one looks at Hardline (rationally!) then they have a better understanding of who I am. The only holy Hardline rules I know of is the ugly truth of humanity that Hardline challenges. The lifestyle unt for everyone, only the strong. (there's some more propagarda for you @) like I Said, I're made a lot of changes since that first letter, but I don't better that I was self-righteous, just a little overcensitive. It was my first anti-Hardline confrontation. Thanks for being a punching bag. Well, please READ my line. I can safely say that I support werything The written, and this is an open window to me. Not too open though, I'm no X'd up 'ego'_ oh, I mean 'emo' gal. As for the agree = understand confusion, I'd put money down that says you're never read Vanguard #1, or ever questioned the philosophy, only attacked it. Don't worry about it, you aren't the only one. Just about every vehinnent anti-Hardliner I've come across can't trally even tell new while Do you know why I am anti- abortion? to you know why I have certain views of human sexuality? Please, Just ask. Once again, somy for the delay

My Concern Invictus has been that its a little less personal than Gaia Screams Just because someone sus the crossed guns they assume that the following pages must be void of emotion If you'd just go back and what was in # one, you'd realize how much of myself I did vea (cope) reveal. Any pocm not noted with an author was myown. I don't want to sul you a copy of my journal This is who I am. I believe in praxis, hence Hardline, but Michelle's hidden inside. 2

For a really long time, my dream was to live in Alaska. I was going to use school as an excuse to go there, but then I realized that I didn't want to study from textbooks while I was there. I wanted to learn real lessons, from Nature. Life is different in Alaska. There I could walk out onto an ocean. I could climb Denali, the Great One. I could die walking out onto the tundra, and turning to face the wind. In the real Alaska life and people are different. There, Nature isn't some intangible force. There, Nature is not the enemy. Nature is master. Nature is God. She gives alot of her resources and beauty, but she commands the harvest and the bounty. Infact my ideal Hardline commune would have to be somewhere there, a little northwest of Fairbanks. We would find a place with good, fertile ground for the growing season and lots and lots of open space, no fences(you have got to have room for all of the Hardline military training of course.). It will all be cross country skiing and solar power(those dark winters sure will be rough). I guess it would be Alaska, or some tiny, crazy island on the Equator, but then everyone else would die of skin cancer. There aren't enough non-white Hardliners yet to maintain a good size population for communal living in that climate. There isn't as big of a melanin issue in the Pacific Northwest, so Alaska it is. Imagine the sorrow at the first loss of a vegan warrior to a wandering polar bear. Did Dave say it, or Shane? Stand for justice/submit to Nature!

For a long time I had put my dreams away, even after my trip there. I met a boy in New Orleans. But a lot has happened since then, we broke up and I've regained direction and purpose. There are alot of things I need to take care of before I leave the Lower 48. It could take years, it could take decades, but I am going back and I'll live out my prologue.

Pro-choice is supposed to be about choice and SELF (ishness), so why push your opinions on anyone? Why advertise your rationale, why try to convert when that's something most pro abortionists hold against the pro-life movement. Abortion is not a political issue, it's not about choice. The issue is a moral one, something people don't like to fess up to nowadays. It's not about Catholics or Baptists (or Hardline) it's what you believe to be right and wrong. I used to be pro-abortion until I finally tuned out all of the PC static that was telling me how I should live my life, so much smarter than weryone else. So mindlessly liberal. This article; Why Pro-Life vegans should be Pro-choice" tried to say something new, but all it did was spit out the same old backwash they've been saying for years. Keep abortion safe and legal. For every Becky Bell, there is a girl who has died just as brutally at the hands of a legal abortion. Yes, there are risks in every surgery but there should never be death, only healing. Aborting a fetus is not like removing a tumor. Using the overpopulation argument is demented and blood thirsty. Gee, out there. Hmmm, I think no harm in wiping out babies in progress, there's already so many cool to wear these comfy, Tive heard that logic before from some burn out, crusty hippie. It's leather Birkenstock's b/c hey, all those cows are killing rainforests. Moo. Blame the bovines, logic only reaffirms the not the industries. Punish the babies, don't help the parents. This pro-choice detached and apathetic mindset, their true rejection repulsion of Nature. I get the same nauseating chills from driving by white washed factory farms in the countryside, as I do from passing abortion dinics in the middle of the city. I agree, nothing infuriates me more than a so called activist whose vision extends no further than their own issue. made The most disturbing rationale hor other was trying to miscarriages (natural) M species to relate women of color" having abortions adverse to avoid "social prejudices"/ " extremely environmental conditions. Oh please, US WOMEN of color don't need your pity, or your advice. feminist As a woman (of color), as a proud as a vegan, as a potential abortion, I oppose them me to about vehimently. PC Patriarchy today kills! making it hard to have children ($)! Abortion is an escape route encouraged by men. Oh well. AST said before, Jm not trying to make any converts, but when it comes to AR., keep your prodeath preaching to yourself. Don't condemn groups like Vegans for life who bring the AR agenda to the mainstream pro-lifers.
